A JUVENILE MURDER.

A murder case, complicated with arson, the most shocking that ever came before a Court of Justice, was tried last week a Nancy. Jeanson, the guilty party, is a young fellow of 20. He belongs to a well-to-do family, who farm a property of their own, consisting of a few hundred acres. The male members of it have been for two generations addicted to drink, a circumstance taken hold of by a doctor who went in for the insanity of Jeanson, who, he said, was born a candidate for lunacy. This Jeanson is of small stature, with a long narrow face, low contracted forehead, remarkably aquiline nose, an overhanging upper lip, a chin running into the neck, and shy, nervous manners. The profile resembles a bird's. The eye is small, dark, ardent and restless. Such a being is predestined to crime. He can no more keep out of it than water can help running down a hill, especially where he is brought up in a French college. It is ascertained that at the age of eight a typhoid fever deprived young Jeanson of whatever moral ballast he possessed; but on the other hand, in preparing for his first communion, at the age of 12, he won the eulogiums of the parish priest, who having seen that his juvenile compositions were indicative of literary capacity, recommended the lad's parents to make him a priest. A frightful vice was also allowed indulgence which had no small share in urging him to perpetrate the crime for which he is to exiate during 20 years in Cayenne. An inflexible discipline, however, was kept up with regard to the exclusion from the college of such passages as the Jesuits think fit to expurgate from their school editions. Jeanson and his teachers had frequent disputes on this subject, which at different times ended in the confiscation of a Virgil, a Horace or a Sophocles, which he had managed to smuggle.

MOTIVE OF THE CRIME—ITS COMMISSION.

The immediate cause of the double crime he committed, was the seizure of an Aristophanes, which he used to devour at his desk, when it was supposed he was committing other things to memory. Directly after it was taken from him, he said to a comrade of the name of Santier, "My heart is oppressed with a thirst for vengeance. But I fear being separated from Jonatte, (another school-fellow) for whom I entertain the most intense affection. You can't conceive the passion I entertain for him. To part from him would be worse than death. Yet my desire to be avenged will consume away my whole being." On Santier saying that revenge was a bad adviser, Jeanson answered: "These three passions are the stuff wherewith to make great men, great saints and great scoundrels. I don't care three straws for life, and as for God, he is all an invention of the priests." The night following this conversation, Jeanson, when he supposed every one was asleep, quietly left the dormitory and proceeded to the pantry, whence he carried all the knives and forks he could get, and from a window, threw them into the Mo-selle, on the banks of which the College of Pont-a-Mousson is built. He then went into the schoolroom, and piling up all the Professors' books he could lay his hands on, he placed them in a pulpit and set fire to them. Fortunately the floors and ceilings were of vaulted stone, otherwise the house would have taken fire. On seeing that the work of destruction was sure to prove successful, he returned with a razor to the dormitory and crept on all-fours towards the bedside of Jonatte. When close to it he bounded like a wild beast on the sleeping lad, who by the light of the night lamp discerned the razor and implored Jeanson not to hurt him, for that he had never harmed him in any way. Jeanson's answer was: "I fear being separated from you, and with that he drew the razor across the throat of his comrade, who died a few minutes after the wound was inflicted.

THE TRIAL—STATEMENT OF THE ACCUSED.

The law officers at an early stage of the prosecution were inclined to account for Jeanson's murder on the ground of insanity, to which hypothesis they still lean, although three doctors have given their opinion against it. Jeanson was sent to a mad-house to be carefully watched, but his conduct there was perfectly sane. His answers before the judges display acumen and legal ability. He denied that the specific acts for which he stands indicted were promoted. He says, "affordable vengeance was resolved on, but I did not know what form it was to take. I got up like one crazy from my bed, and I provided about the house to see in what way I could be instrumental in punishing the Jesuits for having lured me from the classic works I had procured. I saw the pantry door open and I went in and flung the silver into the river. I saw in the school-room, their books lying about, and I said, 'an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth,' and I set them on fire by means of lucifer matches which I always carry about me. I had intended to have defended myself with the razor which I had hidden months before, in my desk had they attempted to lay hands on me. But when I got back to the dormitory I saw Jonatte sleeping calmly, and the terror of a separation and rage at the triumph it would give the Superior over me, took possession of me, and I rushed over to him and put an end to his life.

THE SEIZOWSKI POISONING SCANDAL.

The great Seizowski, better known as Kridmakowski, scandal has been hushed up. The Polish Count who offered a demi monde, lady 20,000, to give, at a bal masque poisoned bonbons to the Duke de Baillieumont; is to be released and expelled France. His accomplice, the medical student, gets off scot free. The reason given for releasing them is that they had not commenced to execute the projected murder. The medical student denies that he had any serious intention of putting nicotine or prussic acid into the sugar plums, and that he only gave capsules of gum arabic steeped in ink to his friend. The Count makes no secret of saying he was in earnest. It is thought that his influence at Court had been brought to bear upon the Emperor to induce him to hush the matter up. Prince de la Tour d'Auvergne, brother of the Cardinal on learning of the Count's arrest, has come over from London where he is the diplomatic representative of France, to see what he could do to prevent things from going farther. He is the stepfather of the lady whose husband stood in Seizowski's way, and derives a large annuity from his wife, the de-devant Madame Leroux, her mother, with whom it was settled, he was not to live from the day of their wedding. He was then a young dashing cavalry officer, and she a vulgar old woman, with no remains of personal beauty, a very contracted intellect, and an intense desire to shine in society. Having been the widow of the Notary of the first Bonaparte, she enjoys a splendid fortune. On the death of M. Leroux, she resolved to buy three ties with her own wealth and the dowry of her daughters, each of whom had 500,000, a year. After she had assumed the style and title of Princess de la Tour d'Auvergne she sought marital happiness, in the very intimate friendship of the Duke, now Prince de Baillieumont, who was somewhat in debt. The tender connection culminated in his marriage with the oldest of the de-devant Leroux, who, terrified at the steps she was obliged to take ran away from the husband given her the day after she became his wife. For three days she was concealed in a tree in the Chamis Elysees, which in hunger alone longed her to leave. The mistress of one-half her fortune, she was called to leave Paris. Sicily was the abiding place selected. A daughter was there born to her who became the matter for a law suit between the Duke and Duchesse, which ended in a legal separation. This child snatched and the mother has taken to dogs, Canary birds and horses, occasionally diverging herself with will adventures. The affair of the Polish Count is only one of a great many. She picked him up at the Baths of Ostende, and she was in intimate correspondence with him when the incident of the Rue Penitence took place. The sister of the Duchesse is married to the Marquis de la Force, with whom the Princess de la Tour d'Auvergne resides. Though the Polish Count is the son of a wealthy landowner in Galicia, he was often in a real need of money. One can therefore without supposing him desperately enamoured of the Duchesse, understand his desire to get rid of the Duke, who has, out of her for him, a life annuity of 170,000.

The Northwest Boundary.

(From the Oregonian.)

Ex-Governor Smith of Vermont, President of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, on the 221 March addressed a letter to the Senate on the proposed treaty with Great Britain concerning the island of San Juan enclosing with it two communications, one written by George Gibbs and the other by G. C. Gardner, in which strong ground was taken against restoring the title of the island to arbitration. The object of these letters was to show the Senate that the position of the group of islands to which San Juan belongs bears an important relation to the terminus of the Northern Pacific Railroad, and that Great Britain should not be permitted to obtain the advantage she would get by having full control in those waters. Says Mr. Gibbs:

So far as the Northern Pacific railroad is concerned, one of its western termini must ultimately be on Puget Sound, and it will never do to leave it entirely under British guns. More than that, the command of the Sound involves that of the Columbia river, for two days' march from its head would carry a hostile force to the mouth of the Cowlitz, with no possible obstruction, except such an interior line of forts as the Government never would consent to keep up, and the population of the country would not justify it. It is far better even to leave the island as it stands, in joint occupation, until we are ready to take it." The danger that war would have resulted had our Government pressed its claims on the Northwestern boundary question, this writer holds was always a bugbear. When the original treaty was made Great Britain would have yielded rather than fight; and at a later period, if firmly met, she would have receded from her claim to the San Juan group. The convention agreed upon by Reverdy Johnson, by which the question was to be referred to the President of the Swiss Confederation has been discussed in the Senate recently, but with what result we are not yet apprised. We venture to think that the proposition will not be acceded to.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The unprecedented success of Rowlands' Macassar Oil during the last half century in promoting the growth, restoring, and beautifying the human hair, has caused imitators to spring up in every possible variety; some so far copy the label as frequently to deceive the unwary; some offer to dispose of the recipe of a Macassar Oil (omitting Rowlands' name), with other recipes of a similar character for a few postage stamps, whilst others profess to manufacture the real (7) article at a considerably reduced price, if the public will only purchase it. Indeed, the name of these wretched purveyors from cheap and trashy receipt books is "Legion," and calls for more than usual care on the part of the purchasers in their selection of articles for the toilet. Messrs. Rowlands have complaints repeatedly from parties who have materially suffered from the use of these trashy compounds; and to frustrate to some extent such impositions, purchasers should see that Rowlands' name is on the wrapper of each bottle. —Daily Telegraph.

The Supreme Court of the State of N. Y. have issued a perpetual injunction against Eaton and Jenkins for counterfeiting Ayer's Cathartic Pills holding them responsible for the cruel imposition in what they have done and restraining them from further like injury to the public. If any class of our people more than another needs the interposition of law to shield them from imposture, it is the sick and suffering who are unable to protect themselves. A remedy so universally employed as Ayer's Pills by all classes, both to cure and prevent disease, should as it does, have every security the law can afford it, from counterfeits and imitation. —(Cabinet, Schenectady.)

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.—Old Wounds, Sores, and Ulcers.—Daily experience confirms the fact which has triumphed over opposition for thirty years—that no cure is known equal to Holloway's remedies for curing bad legs, sores, wounds, diseases of the skin, erysipelas, abscesses, burns, scalds, and in truth all cases where the skin is broken. To cure these infirmities quickly is of primary importance, as the compulsory confinement indoors weakens the general health. The ready means of cure are found in Holloway's Ointment and Pills, which heal the sores and expel their cause. In the very worst cases, the Ointment has succeeded in affecting a perfect cure after every other means has failed of giving any relief. Desperate cases best display its virtues.

A Beautiful and Accomplished Countess Of the island of Cuba, in a letter to a friend in New York City, says: "In buying the Florida Water for me, be sure to get the Murray & Lanman's. I have tried various others, but found them much inferior in every way." It is true that unprincipled men have counterfeited his great perfume. Therefore, buyers should always ask for the Florida Water prepared by the sole proprietors, Lanman & Kemp, New York.

Sore Eyes and Running Ears are the sure indications of scrofulous blood and humors. The poison must be neutralized and purged out of the system, if you hope to be cured. No time is to be lost. Take Bristol's Sarsaparilla and Pills; they will not disappoint you. Rely upon them. Use them freely, as directed, and in a few weeks every vestige of the disease will disappear.

WALTHAM WATCHES.

The extensive use of these watches for the last fifteen years by Railway Conductors, Engineers, and Expressmen, the most exacting of watch-wearers, has thoroughly demonstrated the strength, steadiness, durability and accuracy of the Waltham Watch. To satisfy that class in all these respects, is to decide the question as to the real value of these time-keepers.

More than 400,000 of these watches are now speaking for themselves in the pockets of the people—a proof and a guarantee of their superiority over others.

The superior organization and great extent of the Company's Works at Waltham, enable them to produce watches at a price which renders competition futile, and those who buy any other watch merely pay from 25 to 50 per cent. more for their watches than is necessary. We are now selling Waltham Watches at less prices in greenbacks, than the gold prices before the war. There is no other manufacture of any kind in the United States of which this can be said.

These time-pieces combine every improvement that a long experience has proved of real practical use. Having had the refusal of nearly every invention in watchmaking originating in this country, or in Europe, only those were finally adopted which severe testing by the most skillful artisans in our works, and long use on the part of the public, demonstrated to be essential to correct and enduring time-keeping.

Among the many improvements we would particularize:

The invention and use of a contrary-spring peculiar construction, to prevent damage to the train by the breakage of main springs, is original with the American Watch Company, who, having had the refusal of all other contrivances, adopted Fogg's Patent pinion as being the best and faultless.

Hardened and tempered hair-springs, now universally admitted by Watchmakers to be the best, are used in all grades of Waltham Watches.

All Waltham Watches have dust-proof caps protecting the movement from dust, and lessening the necessity of the frequent cleaning necessary in other watches.

Our new patent stem-winder, or keyless watch, is already a decided success and a great improvement on any stem-winding watch in the American market, and by far the cheapest watch of its quality now offered to the public.

To CALIFORNIANS and others living in portions of the United States where watchmakers do not abound, watches with the above mentioned improvements which tend to insure accuracy, cleanliness, durability and convenience, must prove invaluable.

Every watch bearing the trade mark of Waltham, is guaranteed to be a thoroughly reliable timekeeper.

To prevent imposition, buyers should invariably demand a certificate of genuineness. The trade supplied by Messrs. R. B. Gray & Co., San Francisco, Cal., and generally for sale at retail by all respectable dealers.

Saturday Morning, April 24, 1869.

The terrible fate ending in the cruel butchery of the people on board the English bark John Bright, has created a profound sensation in our community, and one that will not easily be forgotten. These unfortunate creatures battled with the winds and the waves possibly for days before the vessel became unmanageable and drifted on shore; the struggle for life with the boiling surf and their ultimate escape from drowning, only to meet a more horrible death from the savages, is awful to think of; but the attendant circumstances renders the matter still more deplorable. From appearances, the Captain's wife and children and the disabled portion of the crew had remained on the beach while the rest of the men went in search of succor. During their absence the lurking savages ruthlessly murdered the poor, helpless creatures who were anxiously looking for the return of their comrades, and these latter after, it may be, days of wandering, and a fruitless search, returned to the vicinity of the wreck to find their companions cruelly murdered and to meet the same hapless destiny. Judging from the statement of Captain Christensen, the bodies seen by him were those of people murdered subsequent to the time of his first visit, hence, had a gunboat been dispatched hence immediately after the earliest intimation of the affair received here, the lives of many might have been saved. Who is to blame for this? Who has the power of ordering a vessel round to the scene of the catastrophe? Undoubtedly the Executive. We are informed that an application was made to the Governor to have one of the gunboats lying in our harbor dispatched to investigate the matter on receipt of the first intelligence in this city, but the appeal was met by a cold refusal. If this is the case, a terrible responsibility rests with the Executive. Omission is equally criminal with commission, where it can be shown that with ordinary precaution a great evil could have been avoided. We hear every day of the enlightenment and intelligence of the Anglo-Saxon race vaunted as superior to all else in creation; it will require, however, a character of argument more convincing than any that occurs to us, to sustain such a position in the face of facts like these. A ship, through stress of weather, is driven on shore a short distance from a city containing a population possessing superior intelligence and enterprise compared with other British colonies. By superhuman efforts the ill-starred crew succeed in escaping from a watery grave to be slaughtered by savage brutes who perpetrate such horrors within a few miles of this very enlightened community. Surely, if we are endowed with such a high order of intelligence, it cannot be from any want of disposition on the part of the people to do what is right, and the natural conclusion is, that those whose duty it is to look after such matters are neglectful or incapable. In charity we are disposed to accept the latter hypothesis, but that will not prevent the onus falling upon the community, and their only remedy lies in immediately petitioning for the removal of their inefficient officers. The dreadful fate of the murdered crew of the John Bright will rest like a stain on the Colony, and it behooves our citizens to wash their hands of the responsibility by holding the real culprits up to public condemnation.

PROTECTION, like every other valuable element, is only bad when overdone; where it is judiciously applied, it acts like a bounty to certain industries; it increases the revenue and generally assists in making a country wealthy and prosperous. But, where it is used indiscriminately, it acts like a blight on a whole community. Instead of the regular beats in the pulse of trade, it is either still and lifeless, or, as if seeking to free itself from some superincumbent pressure, it takes spasmodic jumps at intervals of time gradually increased, till the beats cease forever, and the stillness of death prevails. There can be no doubt that our Customs' duties were very imperfectly framed; they were formed by men the majority of whom knew nothing about either the theory or practice of commerce. What is the result? Our merchants have continued to struggle under the ponderous weight of vexatious and unnecessary forms, heavy and unequal duties, which latter by the usual facility of bad management, are the heaviest on articles where the reverse should be the case. Perhaps we could not give a better instance of this want of judgment than in the article of wheat. It is well known that in spite of the heavy duty upon foreign wheat, our farmers have never attempted to supply the market; why this should be appears to us a little difficult of explanation, because the duty itself is absolutely more than can be obtained for the wheat when brought to market in some parts of the United States. But so it is, and as the public are not bound to enquire the reason from the farmers, they must conclude that the agriculturists know what to do for the best, and decline to produce wheat. Under these circumstances the common sense view of the matter is this: the duty on wheat being of no advantage to the farmer for whom it was imposed, and being at the same time a real burden to the artisan and trade industry generally, it should be at once abolished. The present duty should not be reduced on flour. We want foreign raw material; we do not want their manufactures; we have plenty of people who are ready to invest their money and labor in the different kinds of manufacture involved in making and packing flour; we have several grist mills ready for the work, and can have twenty others in a short time if we can give them employment. This can and must be done, and the best thing the Executive can do is to hurry the Tariff Commission to a close with its labor, call an extraordinary session of the Legislative Council and remit the duties that are pressing so heavily on trade as to threaten entire destruction if instant action is not taken. The erection and working of grist mills, the manufacture and stitching of bags, and the multifarious operations connected with the manufacture of flour, necessitates a large amount of labor, which would give us an industrious population. By such means we shall find the great solvent of all our difficulties and find ourselves once more on the high road to prosperity.

PELL'S COFFEE has become the favorite Colonial beverage, and is to be found on every breakfast table from Victoria to the foot of the Rocky Mountains.
